

Your Child's Expedition

Dear Parent or Guardian

Your son or daughter is joining an Operation Wallacea expedition this summer. As part of that experience they are going to be travelling to one of the most incredible and remote locations on the planet, and they're going to get to experience things few people rarely get the opportunity to. Operation Wallacea have been running expeditions like this for almost twenty years, and during that time we've had tens of thousands of students and staff join our programs and have safe, enjoyable and life changing experiences.

However, we can appreciate that for many of our participants' parents and loved ones it can be nerve-racking when your child travels on a project like this, particularly when they may never have done so before. As such, we've put together this document of contact information so you have easy access to our details if you need them.

The first and most important thing to note is that due to the remote nature of our projects it is not unusual for our participants to either not have the ability or opportunity to call or contact home for extended periods of time. If anything were to happen during the expedition we will contact you immediately, so please always bear in mind that no news is good news.

The expedition status page is updated regularly with expedition information while we have projects running, and can be found under the "About Us" section at opwall.com, but if you need to speak to us our contact number is available 24/7 while expeditions are running.

Notes

We'd also advise filling in the space below with other useful pieces of information, such as flight details, school contact details, or other notes, then leaving this document somewhere close to hand.
